I certify that during April 2025, I completed academic-English editing of the manuscript titled “Genetic Parameters for Egg Production Traits in KU-Phuphan Black Bone Chicken Population” authored by Kanda Lokaewmanee.

I have edited the manuscript consistent with academic English; however, it is the corresponding author’s responsibility to ensure the formatting style and any specific technical spelling or text presentation are consistent with the writing style of the intended publication. I am an Australian, native-English speaker with Cambridge University CELTA English teaching qualifications and have been the senior English editor for the main Kasetsart University academic journals for more than 10 years. I have consistently edited the English in academic manuscripts over the past 15 years and provide regular two-day workshops to authors on writing in academic English.

Based on my experience, the manuscript text (excluding the Acknowledgements and References sections that were not in the file I edited) is suitable for publication from the viewpoint of academic-English grammar and syntax, subject to any follow up being undertaken as indicated in my comments in the edited manuscript and any associated files. However, I make no comment on the scientific content of the manuscript nor am I responsible for any subsequent changes made to the English in the version of the manuscript that I edited.

Yours sincerely,
