Editor's Notes

As journal of linguistics and education, Parole presents various topics from those two areas. In its development, Parole evaluates its guidelines for authors in order that Parole publications can suit scientific writing convention. We would like to remind you that there are some changes. Therefore, we provide a new template and examples of presenting tables or figures and pictures, and references. For references, Parole uses APA styles citations both in-text and list citations (reference list). In order that the articles published in Parole can be accessed readers from different areas in the world, we require the authors to write in English.

This volume specifically presents five topics namely interruption and silence in turn taking, teaching writing, need analysis dealing with learning problems, need analysis dealing with learning content and its sequence, and philosophical values and local wisdom in Java Panggih traditional ceremony language. Agustina Lestary, Ninuk Krismanti, Yulieda Hermaniar present interruptions and silence in conversations. They focus on the role of interruptions and silence in turn-taking. The next topic deals with teaching writing especially on composing -ing form for second language learner. It was written by M. Fahrudin Aziz and Sulis Triyono. Needs analysis on the problems of Islamic Economics Students in Learning ESP at State College of Islamic Studies (STAIN) Pekalongan was studied by Jaya and Agus Subiyanto. Dian Pranesti, Ayu Kurniawati, and Nurhayati investigated the content and sequencing analysis of English for office skills program in vocational and education training center in Pekalongan. The last topic, the philosophical values and local wisdom in Java panggih traditional ceremony language, was written by Septinlovenia Indrati.

It is impossible for publishing this edition without any helps from other parties. Therefore, in this note, we would like to express our gratitude to the Dean of the Faculty of Humanities, Diponegoro University, Dr. Redyanto Noor, M.Hum. for the funding, the Department Head of Linguistics, Dr. Agus Subiyanto, M.A., and all the reviewers involved in this journal.
